CLEVELAND REITERATES.

His Views on the Financial Question in a Letter to Governor Northern.

In reply to a letter from Governor Northern, of Georgia, asking the President to give his position on financial matters, Mr. Cleveland has sent the following:

EXECUTIVE MANSION, WASHINGTON, D. C., SEPT. 25.
HON. W. J. NORTHERN—My Dear Sir: I hardly know how to reply to your letter of the 15th inst. It seems to me that I am quite plain on record concerning the financial question. My letter accepting the nomination to the Presidency, when read in connection with the message lately sent to the Congress in extraordinary session appears to me to be very explicit. I want currency that is stable and safe in the hands of our people. I will not knowingly be implicated in a condition that will justify me in the least degree answerable to any laborer or farmer in the United States for a shrinkage.

IN THE PURCHASING POWER.
Of the dollar he has received for a dollar's worth of work, or for a good dollar's worth of the product of his toil. I not only want our currency to be of such a character that all kinds of dollars will be of equal purchasing power at home, but I want it to be of such a character as will demonstrate abroad our wisdom and good faith, thus placing upon a firm foundation our credit among the nations of the earth.

I want our financial conditions and the laws relating to our currency so safe and reassuring that those who have money will spend and invest in business and new enterprises instead of hoarding it. You can not cure fright by calling it foolish and unreasonable, and you can not prevent the frightened man from hoarding his money. I want a good, sound and stable money and a condition of confidence that will keep it in use.

Within the limits of what I have written, I am a friend of silver, but I believe its proper place in our currency can only be fixed by a readjustment of our currency legislation and the inauguration of a consistent and comprehensive financial scheme. I think such a thing

Can only be entered upon profitably and hopefully after the repeal of the law which is charged with all our financial woes. In the present state of the public mind, this law cannot be built upon, nor patched in such away as to relieve the situation.

I am, therefore, opposed to the free and unlimited coinage of silver by this country alone and independently, and I am in favor of the immediate and unconditional repeal of the purchasing clause of the so-called Sherman law.

I confess I am astonished by the opposition in the Senate to such prompt action as would relieve the present unfortunate situation.

My daily prayer is that the delay occasioned by such opposition may not be the cause of plunging the country into deeper depression than it has yet known, and that the Democratic party may not be justly held responsible for such a catastrophe.

Yours very truly,
GROVER CLEVELAND.

What Do You Take Medicine for?

Because you are sick and want to get well, or because you wish to prevent illness. Then remember that Hood's Sarsaparilla cures all diseases caused by impure blood and debility of the system. It is not what its proprietors say but what Hood's Sarsaparilla does, that tells the story of its merit. Be sure to get Hood's, and only Hood's.

Snow falls in Pennsylvania and Massachusetts Friday.

The Kentucky Association will hold their fall meeting as usual. The intention to declare the meeting off has been reconsidered so Mr. J. E. Hanly the Secretary writes us the prospect is excellent for the best meeting in the history of the Association.

Mr. Robert A. Thompson will preach at the Baptist church next Sunday morning.

"The Old Man."

"Ichabod, my boy, methought I heard you speak of your sire this morning as 'the old man.' You are 17 years of age, are you not? Just so! This is the age when callow youth has his first attack of the big head. You imagine at this moment that you know it all. I observe by the cut of your trousers and the angle of your hat, the flavor of your breath, and the style of your tooth-pick shoes, and the swagger of your walk, that you are badly gone on yourself. This is an error of youth which your uncle can overlook, but it pains him sore to hear you speak in terms of disrespect of one you should never mention save by the sacred name of 'father.' He may not be up to your style in the modern art of making a fool of himself, but, ten to one, he forgets more in a week than you will ever know. He may not enjoy smoking gutter snipes, chopped fine and laced in delicate tissue paper, but he has borne a good many hard knocks for your sake, and is entitled to all the reverence your shallow brain can muster. By and by after you are through knowing it all, and begin to learn something, you will be ashamed to look in the glass, and will wonder where the fool-killer kept himself when were ripe with sacrifice. And when 'the old man' grows tired of the journey and stops to rest, and you fold his hands across his bosom and take a last look at the face that has grown beautiful in death you will feel a sting of regret that you ever spoke of him so grossly disrespectful a manner, and when you hear other sprouts of imbecility using the language that so delighted you in the germinal period of manhood, you will feel like chasing them with a sled stick, and punishing their skulls to see if there is any brain tissue on the inside."—Ex.

H. Clay King's Last Speech.

Col. H. Clay King, the murderer of David H. Poston, now serving a life sentence in the Tennessee penitentiary as a punishment for his crime, has issued an address to the public in which he makes some sensational charges. He alleges that his conviction was brought about by conspiracy between Judge Julius J. Dubois, of Shelby county criminal court, and relatives of Poston. Dubois, he asserts, used every means in his power to secure conviction in order to placate the Postons, who were his political enemies. King also charges that Mrs. Gideon J. Pillow and David H. Poston, the murdered man, were criminally intimate. The publication of the article has caused a sensation. King wrote it for the purpose of arousing public sentiment in his favor, in the hope of securing a pardon, but he will fall in his object, as Governor Turney was a member of the supreme court when King's death sentence was affirmed.

Cold and Heat.

Water freezes and becomes ice at 32 degrees Fahrenheit, whereas mercury only freezes at 39 degrees below zero Fahrenheit. Olive oil, on the contrary, shows signs of congelation at from 4 to 45 degrees Fahrenheit. The three substances quoted being all liquids, the difference in the loss of heat requisite to bring them to solidification is very great indeed. The action of heat on fluids or solids is equally various. Water boils at 212 degrees Fahrenheit, lead melts at 612 degrees; the fusing point of gold is 2016 degrees, and of iron 3000 degrees.

For Trade.

I have for trade, 13 nice yearling cattle, that I am desirous to exchange for two good yearling mules. Must be good ones.

Democrats do not forget to register to-day if you expect to vote at the November election. Every Republican—white and black—will see that his name is written there. The Republicans propose to make a fight for municipal offices.

The Kentucky soldiers, their widows and orphans are drawing from the National Treasury about $1,000,000 annually.

ANOTHER ROWAN

COUNTY MURDER!

Mr. Fouch, Sheriff, Kills County Clerk Geo. Johnson.

Yesterday was county court day of Rowan county, and there were about two hundred people in Morehead.

Mr. Fouch, Sheriff of the county, was in County Clerk Johnson's office about 11:30 o'clock, collecting taxes, when his right to collect delinquent taxes which had been reported to the State auditor, came up and a dispute arose, which was followed by the lie, and the Clerk struck at or struck the Sheriff, who drew his pistol, shooting the Clerk twice, once through the breast and once through the brain, killing him instantly. Fouch surrendered to County Judge, Crosswhite. At first there was intense excitement, but it soon died down, and Fouch was placed under a guard. The two officers were not on very friendly terms.

ACROSS A BARREL

They Stretched the Impositor and Whaled Him.

About two years ago J. W. Coppock came from Louisville, Ky., and accepted the management of the Jacksonville, (Ala.) Ice Company. His department was that of a perfect gentleman, and soon had the respect and esteem of the citizens of Jacksonville and engaged himself to a young lady of that place. The marriage was to come off two weeks hence.

Tuesday evening he looked out that he had a living wife and two children in Louisville, Ky. The citizens assemble, purchased a whole-bone buggy whip, invited the impositor to lay himself across a barrel with face down for about 20 minutes, and the lash was applied in a genteel manner. He was then put on board the north-bound East Tennessee, Virginia & Georgia train and gently reminded that he had better shake the dust of Alabama from his feet, which he did without further persuasion.—Cincinnati Post.

Russell Nominated.

The Massachusetts Democratic Convention met in convention on Wednesday, at Boston, and nominated Hon. J. W. Russell for Governor. When "Russell was introduced, he said: "If our opponents, leaving the State issue, make their flight on the ground of the late financial disturbances and the stoppage of industries they will gain only the votes of the ignorant and unthinking, whose drift of late years has been to their side.

The Sherman law was a shock to foreign confidence. The McKinley tariff was the fulfillment of a bargain in which the right to lay and collect taxes, the highest act of sovereignty, the right conferred by the people solely for the purposes of revenue and limited closely to the need of Government were transferred to individuals and corporations.

Mr. Russell in closing praised the course of President Cleveland, and said: "Strong, warm-hearted type of American citizenship, the best example of the broadest statesmanship—the question in our election is, will Massachusetts stand by his administration?"

The rest of the ticket is as follows: For Secretary of State, Hon. James W. McDougal, of Marlboro; for Treasurer, and Receiver General, Hon. Eben S. Stevens, of Dudley; for Attorney General, Hon. Charles S. Hiley, of Lowell; for Auditor, Hon. John T. Wheelwright, of Boston.

Rev. E. E. Bonar has been called to pastorate the First Baptist Church, Alton, S. C., a city of nearly 3,300 population. Mr. Bonar is an active pastor, a number one preacher, and has the esteem of this entire people who will rejoice that he has a large field in which to do good.

Louisville Tobacco Market.

Sales on our market for the week just closed amount to 5,756 hhds, with receipts for the same period of 973 hhds. Sales on our market since January 1, amount to 104,357 hhds. Sales of the crop of 1892 on our market amount to 106,313 hhds.

The market for the better grades of burley has been more active this week, with a tendency to higher values. The medium grades remain unchanged, while common grades are somewhat easier. The hauling of the burley crop has progressed rapidly during the week, and considerable tobacco has been cut on account of the few recent cold days and slight frost in some parts of the State.

The following quotations fairly represent our market for burley tobacco, (1892 crop)

Trash. (Dark damaged tobacco $3.50 to $4.00.

Common colory trash, $4.25 to $5.00

Medium to good colory trash, $5 to $7.

Common lugs, not colory, $4.00 to $5.

Common colory lugs, $5 to $7.50.

Medium to good colory lugs, $7.50 to $8.50.

Common to medium leaf $8.00 to $9.

Medium to good leaf, $9 to $14.

Good to fine leaf, $14 to $16.

Select wrappy styles, $16 to $26.

Tender of Their Feelings.

The annual report of the Health Officers credits two Louisville deaths during the past mortuary year to Intemperance, and in obedience to the injunction to speak no ill of the dead, considerably assigns the others to cirrhosis of the liver, heart failure and other misanthropic forms of euphemistic mendacity. As brutal candor would lacerate the sorrows of relatives and wound the tender sensibilities of the back-packer, it is well, perhaps, that the bitter truth should thus be officially sugar-coated. But all the same, red and amber liquors killed more than two or two hundred people in this town during the past year. (Louisville Times.)

EDITOR'S ADVOCATE.

The city needs efficient officers for the preservation of its peace and good order. One of the most important places to be filled, is that of City Attorney. To fill this acceptably, requires a man fearless in the discharge of his duty, and with a fitness to make a vigorous prosecution where it is needed. Every man, no matter how good he may be otherwise, does not necessarily possess these qualifications. A man does not have to be hand in glove with gamblers, brawlers and the worst elements of society, to make him an unfit person to hold this (for our city's) peace important office. I have no word of disparagement for any one of the candidates for this office. I do desire to call attention to the special fitness of one among them for the duties of the place to which he aspires. The fact is well known to all, that almost the only enemies he has made and certainly the most active ones he possesses, are those whose enmity can be distinctly traced to his vigorous prosecution or fearless administration of the law, as it applied to them or some of their friends. Surely a man who is fearless in the discharge of his duty, efficient active and painstaking in prosecuting all offenders; and who always exhibits a lively and intelligent interest in the city's affairs, should have the votes of all right thinking citizens. Such a man is Judge H. L. Clay McKee, and I am firmly persuaded it is very much to the city's interest to elect him. I hope the voters can see this as I do.

A CITIZEN.

The store of Mr. Charles Stafford at Jeffersonville was burned on Friday night. The Postoffice was located in the building and all the effects together with the stock of goods were lost. The goods were insured for $1,000 and the building which belonged to Mrs. Saylor for $500.

Elder J. B. Greenwald closed his last meeting at Sideview last Sunday night, with ten confessions and baptisms and one reclaimed. Large audiences and a deep interest throughout the meeting.

GIVES UP THE WORLD.

Madeline Pollard Turns her Back Upon the World and a Home For Fallen Women.

A Washington special says: Miss Madeline Pollard, who has used Congressmen Breckinridge, of Kentucky, for breach of promise, has voluntarily identified herself with the House of Mercy here, which seeks to reclaim fallen women. Miss Pollard entered the institution soon after the proceedings against Mr. Breckinridge were begun. She is not known as Miss Pollard in the Home, having assumed another name. She has not entered the institution as an unfortunate woman are received. She has been accepted as a willing worker and is now engaged in missionary and educational duties. Miss Pollard practically has surrendered all her liberties. She was at first assigned to educational work, but insisted upon sharing in the drudgery of the institution.

The inmates in the institution, which are supported by the Episcopal churches, are kept by the church people under close surveillance and are not allowed, even in the day time, to go out unless accompanied by one of the "workers."

A Card.

I desire to return my sincere thanks to the many friends who have so kindly tendered me their support in the race for the Democratic nomination for Chief of Police. I find that my business engagements are such as to demand that I shall forego the pleasure of accepting the very liberal support tendered me. I therefore withdraw my name as a candidate for Chief of Police. But I desire to state distinctly that this is done in the interest of no candidate, and I leave the race with no entanglements. Again thanking my friends for their hearty support,

I am, very respectfully,
S. W. GAITHER.

Everett gets the Postoffice.

The Postmaster General informed Representative M. C. Lile on Saturday that the appointment of George C. Everett to be Postmaster at Mt. Sterling had been made out and his nomination would go to the Senate with others yesterday. This ends the long waiting of the democrats to see this place filled by one of their number. As indicated elsewhere Mr. John C. Wood the present incumbent sent in his resignation some days since. Mr. Wood has made a splendid official and will vacate the office with the good opinion of all who have had any dealings with him in his official capacity.

The Traders Deposit Bank will resume business fairly some day during this week. The impression got out that the bank would begin business Monday, and on that day large deposits were tendered, thereby making the bank officials happy over flattering prospects. The condition of the bank is better than at any time since its organization, and the friends of the institution are showing their faith by their offerings of substantial support. While the assignee was entitled to at least $37,500, and the attorneys also a handsome sum, they manifested their generosity by giving their services free of any charge. This resumption will, under at least $375,000, thereby giving circulation to a large amount, and restoring confidence in the business circles of our immediate section.

D. D. Taylor, who was licensed to the ministry by the Baptist church, last Wednesday evening, has resigned as Secretary of the Y. M. C. A., and left for Louisville to attend the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary. He is a man of rare talents, thoroughly in love with his calling, energetic, strong in mind, and with a vigorous physique, will attain to eminence. The members of the Y. M. C. A. and citizens regret to lose Mr. Taylor, but will him God speed in his high calling.

Mrs. Charles Parsons, nee Williams, aged 23 years, died from typhoid fever at her home in Carlin, Thursday. She leaves a husband and two children. J. W. Parsons and two sons, Jesse and Roger, attended the funeral.

A New Through Sleeping Car Line

From Chicago to Seattle, via the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul and Great Northern railways, has been established and first-class sleeping cars will hereafter run daily from Chicago at 10:30 p. m., arriving at Seattle 11:30 p. m., fourth day. This undoubtedly is the best route to reach the North Pacific Coast.

It is almost a certainty that the men implicated in the hold-up of the Illinois Central train at Centalla on the morning of Thursday, Sept. 29, were the same who, on two different occasions, held up the Mobile & Ohio train at Forest Lawn, just beyond the city limits of East St. Louis. The police are in possession of evidence which indicates the complexity of at least two of the Centalla robbers in the Forest Lawn affair.

Miss Ida Reynolds and Irving English who set fire to a house which caused a $30,000 fire in East Knoxville a few days ago, were sentenced to the penitentiary for seven years at Knoxville Tennessee.

THE ADVOCATE.

Checked—the progress of Consumption, its cure, too, if it's taken in time. What is needed is the one unit in these forms (Lungs) is Consumption.

Purify your blood—that's the first thing. Rid it of the toxins and poisons that make it easy for this dreaded disease to follow. Then if you haven't delayed too long, you can be cured.

From beginning to end, the remedy is Dr. Finner's Golden Medical Discovery. It's the most potent blood-cleanser, strength-restorer, and flesh-builder known to medical science. Consumption, and every form of Scrophulous and blood-taint, all yield to it. For Weak Lungs, Spitting of Blood, Bronchitis, Asthma, and all severe, lingering Coughs, it's an unequalled remedy—and the only one for the blood and Lungs that's guaranteed. If it doesn't benefit or cure, in every case, you have your money back.

THE OCEAN.

The ocean's waves, in midnight restlessness, seek still the unrequited, unrequited shore. Nor know where they shall fall—nor hear the roar. Of their own music—But with sweep and stress. Beat on the sands which fall not to their impress. And break in baffled spray on rocky shores. On rocks which heed no hap—no doom deplore. They are inanimate, dumb, and passionless.

Incessant—infinite—without intent! Thus throbs the ocean—thus the ocean flows! A frenzied striving for unknown regions. Unending toll with no accomplishment. The waves are motion—the ocean is death! The ocean, life—the silence, sterility.

—Robert Burns, Wilson, in October Peters Southern Magazine.

California For Health.

I am often asked what part of Southern California is best adapted to certain individual cases. This is, of course a matter of personal and constitutional election. As a rule, however, I may say that rheumatic, neuralgic and laryngeal cases do better in the interior, since the sea air loses much of its severity in traveling inland between a hot sun and a warm sea. Convalescing cases recovering from some long and tedious illness, and those suffering from nervous prostration, insomnia, or the debilitated stages of advanced consumption, are more benefited by the bracing air of the coast—the greater inviability here experienced and the greater amount of atmospheric moisture having the desired effect.

It is the absence of enervating heat during the day or night, that permits of so many restorations of shattered health which would elsewhere be impossible. For this reason invalids have been induced to adopt a California summer for climatic change or for a residence, and our Eastern friends can readily see that it is erroneous to consider California only as a winter resort.

To the tourist the region offers every conceivable variety of temperature, with in either Europe, Africa or Asia. The shores of Africa and the lullor of the great Sahara; the highlands of Spain and the low hills and plains of Italy; the abrupt Apennines and the more gigantic Alps of either Switzerland or Bavaria; the heather-clad hills of Scotland and the sunny felds of the Greek archipelago—all have here their counterparts. Yet with this strange diversity the climatic factorial influence of the great heated desert and the vast, cold ocean combine to produce a homogeneity that makes California unique among the known regions of the globe.—E. C. Remondin, M. D., in California.

He Voted For Jackson.

A Presidential election was pending, and I had come from the farthest West to hear, and to take part with, some speakers who were to address the people at a point not ten miles from this famous battle-ground of the Wabash. But I had no heart in the work before us; and so I went about, all alone, trying to find some one who had at least heard of "Lord and Lady Baltimore."

Not a sound or trace of them or their tradition of the haunted island could I hear; though I asked and asked till the day was far spent. At last, when the patriotic speaking was all over, I went up to where stood a group of friends, and was introduced to an old man who had voted for Jackson. He leaned on a hickory staff and looked across with the cornea of his mouth with all his might. He had no teeth, but somehow he managed to grind up enough to keep a little stream of tobacco juice trickling down each corner of his mouth all the time.

It was a Democratic group; Proctor Knott, Governor of Kentucky; John P. Irish, the California orator, and many other able men, were of this group, and had spoken. But the idol of all Democrats here, Daniel Voorhees, was not present. And so the old man who had "voted for Jackson" was not glad.

"It's dull when Dan ain't here; we expected to hear some speakin'!" This is what the old patriarch who had "voted for Jackson" said right in the presence of Governor Knott and John P. Irish. They smiled pleasantly and soon faded away, leaving me alone with the man who had "voted for Jackson."

"You have been here some time," I said.

"I voted for Jackson," and with this he struck the heavy ferrule of his hickory stick hard on the ground, as if to say, "I voted for Jackson right here, sah." But he was too busy chewing to talk much.

"Indians here when you came, air?" I asked earnestly.

"Yes sah! Indians, and b'ar and buffalo, and deer; mo' in the river 'round the island yander. Yes, sah; great place for deer; we used to kill ten of a night, sah; take canoes, a dozen of us with hickory bark torches, and go whirling around the island, sah. Brightest light in the world, sah. Hickory bark torches; deer can't see you; hickory bark torches makes 'em blind; kill 'em with a club. Why that night after the day I voted fur Jackson, sah!"

Here some Democratic grangers came up to be introduced to the man who had "voted for Jackson," and I passed on, to meditate in the twilight over the solution of the most splendid and inspiring mystery of my childhood. I had merely seen men hunting deer with hickory bark torches near the old battle-ground of Harrison's Tippecanoe.—Joachim Miller, in October Peters' Southern Magazine.

In an age of fraud and adulteration, it is certainly gratifying to know that such an extensively-used preparation as Ayer's Sarsaparilla may be implicitly relied upon. It never varies either in quality, appearance, or effect, but is always up to the standard.

A Universal Beautifier.

Clearer, effective, and agreeable! Ayer's Hair Vigor has taken high rank among toilet articles. This preparation causes thin, weak hair to become abundant, strong, and healthy, and restores gray hair to its original color.

Stub Ends of Thought

Trust is the strongest link in the chain of association.

Not one time in a million are a man's tears dishonest; what may be said of a woman's is different.

Everybody would be perfect if everybody else thought so.

Matrimony is love's eye-opener.

Gossip is the bullet in the gun of idle curiosity.

Honesty is not contagious.

Good Looks.

Good looks are more than skin deep, depending upon a healthy condition of all the vital organs. If the liver be inactive, you have a bilious look, if your stomach be disordered you have a dyspeptic look and if your kidneys be affected you have a pined look. Secure good health and you will have good looks. Electric Bitters is the great Alternative and Tonic acts directly on these vital organs. Cures plagues, biliousness, and gives a good complexion. Destruction of Forests in the United States.

The United States sells its forest lands at $2.50 an acre, lumber companies indirectly acquiring a square mile of land for a little over $1000, while the timber on it is often worth $20,000. The French government forests return an average profit of $250 an acre annually from timber sales, two and a half percent interest on the value of the land. The United States now owns only enough forest land to provide a continual timber-supply to its present population, if forests are managed and lumber used as in Germany. The United States is exactly in the position of a man making large drafts on and using up an immense idle capital, which if properly invested, would return an interest sufficient for his expenditures. In 1885 the government of Bavaria sent an expert forester to study the timber of the United States, who stated: "In fifteen years you will have to import your timber, and as you will probably have a preference for American kinds, we shall begin to grow them in order to be ready to send them to you at the proper time."—Century.

Overcome by the unknown.

The man with kidney disease may first apply for relief from dropsy or other ailments, or the woman with kidney disease, or female weakness may first apply for treatment for lame back or rheumatic aches about the spine or much on the face. People often find themselves in the situation so aptly figured by the Hon. John Allen of Mass., the wit of the last Congress. Here is his celebrated rhyme "let'sy" on the floor of the House to the great amusement of that body.

"There's Wanny runs the post office And Levi runs the bar, While baby runs the White House And—where's it here we are?" Well, it's so with the afflicted. To avoid those ills, or to cure them, Dr. Finner's Kidney and Backache Cure will not disappoint. The Rev. J. Z. Mearns, late presiding Elder, Grove City, Pa., Apr. 4, 1888, writes: "For 25 years I suffered with kidney trouble. I received a bottle of Dr. Finner's Kidney and Backache Cure. I have had less backache in the last 10 years than I formerly had in 10 months. I feel entirely cured." Money refunded if satisfaction not given. Make home a bottle today. It means happiness and prolonged life.

Criminals Cannot be Citizens.

There was much talk about the rights of American workmen during the Homestead strike last year and the so-called monopolists were roundly abused for their treatment of freemen citizens. Hugh Ross, one of the leaders in the strike and a member of the advisory committee which set up an independent and revolutionary government in Homestead and refused to allow the regularly elected officers of the town and county to do their duty, recently applied for naturalization papers. He is a Scotchman and a subject of Queen Victoria, and he was such when he was violating the laws of the State of Pennsylvania. United States District Judge Buffington, of Pittsburg, has refused to naturalize him, because indictments are hanging over him charging him with murder, treason and riot in connection with the Homestead affair. It would seem to follow from this decision that if Ross is convicted he can never become an American citizen. This would not be a result which would be the source of great regret. Convicts are not allowed to come into this country as immigrants. Neither are paupers, nor cripples, unless some one guarantees their support. There is no reason why unnaturalized criminals should be treated differently from criminals who have not yet entered the country. Even American born citizens lose their citizenship when convicted of crime. Foreign born workmen who intend to make this country their home should consider the fate of Ross and hesitate before they engage in unlawful and riotous demonstrations.—Brooklyn Eagle.

The "Reversible Falls" in the St. John River.

But the most picturesque, as well as the most striking manifestation of the tidal rise and fall is at the mouth of the St. John river at St. John, New Brunswick. Here may be witnessed on every tide a change of conditions as sudden and as complete as a quick change of scene in a drama; the beauty of the landscape, enhanced by the handiwork of man, adding greatly to the impressiveness of the phenomenon. This is locally known as the "reversible falls," although "reversible rapids" would be more appropriate. In a map of St. John and its environs, drawn in 1784 by an officer of the St. John's Loyalists, the matter is referred to in a marginal note:

"The falls in this river are justly ranked among the curiosities of the world; they are at the mouth of the river, about one mile from the entrance, and are navigable four times in twenty-four hours, which commands great attention, as only a few minutes are required to pass in safety."

"The tide rising from twenty to twenty-four feet, at high water is six or eight feet higher than the river, which occasions a fall in the river as well as about the whole water of the country having to pass between two rocks sixty yards distant."

The scene of these rapids is a beautiful gorge through which, in remote ages, the river appears to have forced its way. For twenty minutes on each flood and flood, the river here is as placid as a mountain lake on a tranquil day. Suddenly a streak of white spreads across the gorge, and in a few minutes the calm is succeeded by the tumult of rapidly whirling waters. The reflections of the rocky shores and of the graceful outlines of the stupendous and cauliflower bridges which span the mouth of the gorge are obliterated as if a mirror had suddenly been ruthlessly shattered.—Gustav Kolbe in Scribner.

Pronounced Hopeless, Yet Saved.

From a letter written by Mrs. Ada E. Hard of Gorton, S. D., we quote: "Was taken with a bad cold, which settled on my lungs, cough set in and finally terminated in Consumption. Four doctors gave me up saying I could not live but a short time. I gave myself up to my Savior, determined if I could not stay with my friends on earth, I would meet my absent one above. My husband was advised to get Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. I gave it a trial, took in all eight bottles; it has cured me and thank God I am now a well and hearty woman." Trial bottle free at W. S. Lloyd's Drugstore, regular size, 50c and $1.00.

DANGEROUS LOOKING BOXES.

Ship's Store That Frightened the Captain of a British Vessel.

There is an amusing incident which happened on her majesty's ship Canada in 1885, when the Duke of York was on board. It occurred when the vessel was but a few days at sea. Because royalty was aboard unusual precautions were observed to make the ship thoroughly safe.

When an inventory of the commissariat was taken, two suspicious looking boxes were found among the stores of which no account was discovered. This was a time when the alleged activity of Irish dynamite was giving Englishmen many troubled dreams. An explosion almost in midocean had sunk a ship attached to the Pacific squadron only a short time before, and it was believed by many that the explosion had been caused by dynamite.

The commissariat officers of the Canada were sorely dismayed by the two mysterious boxes. Might not some fanatical Irish patriot have sought to gain for himself everlasting glory by smuggling an infernal machine on board the ship which was to carry the possible future king of a hated nation? Such a machine would be bound to do its deadly work when least expected.

What could the suspicious boxes contain if not the doom of a warship with all on board? The price was the coveted game, to be sure, but 500 insignificant souls must go with him. Who could blame the officers for being alarmed? There was something to be afraid of about when no account of the boxes could be found among the ship's papers. No time must be lost, for before another hour they might all be scattered to the elements.

The sedate old captain ordered the two boxes to be slipped overboard as "damaged goods" and the matter strictly secreted. The price was paid, and the men in order to avoid a panic.

After more than two months on the ocean another inventory of the ship's stores became necessary, for the captain intended to take in a new supply at Halifax.

Now the invoice of two boxes of German sausages taken on board at Portsmouth was found among some other papers. But the goods were not in stock, nor did the accounts show that they had been consumed during the voyage.

What had been a dark secret with a few soon furnished amusement for the whole ship, for the boxes contained German sausage. —London Tit-Bits.

Laughter.

Laughter has often dissipated disease and preserved life by a sudden effort of nature. We are told that the great Erasmus laughed so heartily at an asthmatic man that he broke a tumor and recovered his health. In a singular treatise on "Laughter" Joubert gives two similar instances. A patient being very low, the physician, who had ordered a dose of tartar, countermanded the medicine, which was left on the table.

A monkey in the room jumping discovered the goblet, and having taken it made a terrible grimace. Again putting up his tongue to it, he perceived some sweetness of the dissolved manna, while the rumbler had sunk to the bottom, thus emboldened, he swallowed the whole, but found it such a nauseous potent that after many strange and fantastic grimaces he ground his teeth in agony, and in a few minutes lay prostrate on the floor. The whole affair was so ludicrous that the sick man burst into repeated peals of laughter, and the doctor, finding his fulness led to health. —New York Ledger.

Authors of Plays.

An author speaking on the compensations of playwrights said the other day: "I cannot encourage any one to go into the business of writing plays. No one can conceive of the trouble we have in getting a play produced. It is almost an impossibility to get one read and accepted. You have wandered perhaps why certain plays that seem to be drawing crowded houses are suddenly taken off. The cause is very simple. Managers cannot afford to give authors the royalties they demand. For one or two years possibly a good play is a financial success to the manager, but after that he begins to lose money. The author refuses to reduce his terms, and the play is taken off. You will ask why author and manager do not compromise. That is just what we all want to know. It ought to be done, but the fact remains that they do not." —New York Tribune.

He Will Learn Later On.

Little Johnny Smart is a halfbrother of Pie Alley and sells daily papers for a livelihood. He has learned all the naughty tricks practiced by his comrades except tobacco chewing. His initial trial at this accomplishment was made a few days ago, but it made him ill, and he retired to his corner after the first round. The other boys laughed at him for his failure, which drew out this comment from the suffering Johnny: "Get away, you fellows! It would make you sick, too, if you want to learn to chew." —Boston Courier.

A Snake That Teaches a Moral.

Here is a fable concerning a certain land infested by donkeys whose continuous braying disturbed the peace:

A valiant knight who heard of them said to his fellows: "Come, let us away and slay these pestiferous braying donkeys so that the island may have rest." So each brave man buckled on his trusty sword, and away they went. When they landed on the island, they were met by one of its wise men, who, on learning the intention of the knight, warned him that the donkeys were immortal and could not be killed. "Do you tell me that I and my brave men cannot silence these donkeys?"

Forthwith the knight and his men laid about them right and left till the ground was covered with defunct donkeys. Then they wiped their blades and retired to rest. In the morning the knight awoke and found the knight, who had slain his hundred carcasses, or at least let us say more than the first. "But when they reached the field, behold! every donkey was on his feet, braying loudly as ever. 'What did I tell you!' said the wise man. 'If you kill them today, they will be alive tomorrow.' 'But,' replied the knight, 'those donkeys are in their continual braying!'"

"Why, we let them bray and go ahead with our business or pleasure, the same as if they were not there!" —Illinois Suffragist.

Worshippers of Strange Gods.

Snake worshippers are more numerous than river worshippers in the Punjab. They have always been a large denomination in heathen countries. Why they worship snakes is a problem that has been frequently discussed to no particular purpose. But people who worship owls, lizards, lobsters, rats and mice will worship anything, and perhaps snake worshippers are no exception. The reason, because snakes are so widely distributed and so far from exclusive in their habits. If a man worships an opossum or an ornithomys, he must go to Australia to do so, but serpents are everywhere. So is the earth (Pithi), and the earth, as Hertha, Demeter and under many other names, has been worshipped by all nations.

Even the untutored Pawnee are earth worshippers and bury articles by way of sacrifice, which is more economical than burning them, as they can be dug up again. The central mound is a good deal adored in the Punjab. In Scotland it became the fairy hill, as at Aberfoyle, the same as the rock of the druids, respect in times comparatively modern. The church was usually built as near it as possible, perhaps to counteract the influence of the ancestral magic, or to acquire any local sanctities that might be going. —London News.

Ice Water Early in the Morning.

I am always surprised when I see a man fill his stomach the first thing in the morning with a glass of ice water. The ordinary stomach is tired and weary, and it takes a while to wake with the rest of the system, it feels like stretching and resting, taking its hands for a little more sleep and a little more rest, and then, as the rest of the system, it wakes, then, must be its surprise to have thrust into it, through no agency of its own, the unwilling receptacle, a current of ice water. Is it not ice water? Having swallowed a glass of ice water, the ordinary idiot thrusts into the same stomach his oatmeal, his berries, his beefsteak, his potatoes, and his loaf of bread, and then wonders that he feels heavy.

Why, do you know what the stomach is doing all this time? It is wrestling with the water. Digestion cannot begin until the water is brought to its normal stomach temperature, and while the overburdened, overworked, strained organ wrestles with the water, it gives up its best to warm this horrid stuff in it food, your steak, your berries and your oatmeal, and there they float upon the gastric juice and the water are at a common temperature and the work of assimilation may properly begin. —Howard in New York Recorder.

Bacilli in the Dust of Cities.

Dr. Manfredi has been announcing some disquieting facts concerning the omnipresence of fatal microbes. In the busy thoroughfare of a crowded city he has found 1,000,000 microbes to a gram of dust, and in the dirtiest streets 5,000,000,000 per gram. As we breathe in this dust-producing microbes were found among these, the number of such morbid germs being directly proportional to the aggregate number of cases.

Of 43 cases in which he inoculated guinea pigs with Neapolitan dust, he detected the tubercle bacillus, the germ of consumption in three, the bacillus of pus in eight, the bacillus of tetanus in two, the bacillus of malignant oedema in four and other fatal bacilli. A medical paper suggests that the streets of American cities should be tested for microbes, and is confident that in many of them a harvest as rich in variety and deadly as that of Naples could easily be secured. Emphasis is given to Dr. Manfredi's alarming statistics by the results of some investigations recently published by Professor Uffelmann with respect to the carrying of cholera bacilli by means of letters, postal cards, etc. —Pittsburg Dispatch.

Beat the Experts.

The insanity expert is sometimes considered a rather agile and unscrupulous character. The readiness with which different experts deduce directly opposite conclusions from the same premises proves very perplexing to jurors and the public at large in many trials that attract public attention. The American juror, however, is also a person of some versatility, and capable upon occasion of competing with any class of experts upon equal terms. His ability to do this was just been demonstrated in an interesting case in New York.

David J. Solomon, a merchant of New York city, had an engagement to marry Miss Clara Perry Thomas on the evening of the 8th of August last, but failed to appear. His reason for absence was unexceptionable, for at the hour for the nuptials he was an involuntary inmate of the Broomfield House Asylum. He had been sent there at the instance of his brother, Henry, who had obtained a certificate from two physicians that David was insane, and on that certificate a judge granted an order for his confinement in the asylum. His intended bride was told that he was insane, but the place where he was confined was withheld from her.

David Solomon had two-thirds interest in a business amounting to $250,000 a year; the other third being held by his brother Henry. All his family were against him on the question sanity, and fourteen out of seventeen of his employees ranged themselves on the same side. His intended bride, however, believed him sane, and obtained a writ of habeas corpus upon the return of which the question of his sanity was submitted to a jury. All the experts said David was insane. These included not only the two physicians that had given the certificate in the first place, but the Superintendent of the asylum and other physicians connected with the institution. They said he was in the first stage of paresis. No expert testified on the other side, and it is said that none could be found who would pronounce David sane. Nevertheless, the jury were unanimously of the opinion that he was sane, and a good business man, and said so in their verdict after a brief period of consultation.

The testimony of the experts in this case was wholly disregarded by the jury. Two of the experts were concerned in sending the patient to the asylum, and the other two in keeping him there, and were in a measure bound to say he was insane. The jury, which consisted of several bankers and brokers, several merchants, an ex-soldier Commissioner and a publisher, heard David testily, listened to the other evidence in the case, and overruled the experts. The next day David and Miss Thomas were married.

Whether it turns out in the end that this man is insane or not, there is a serious objection to a system by which one may be secretly incarcerated in an asylum at the bare suggestion of a person who has an obvious interest in getting him out of the way. Publicity in such cases is not always desirable, but there should be some means provided by the liberty of the citizen may be guarded. —New York World.

Col. Breckinridge is getting little comfort from the newspapers. There are a few very few in Kentucky which have attempted to defend him. The most of them openly censure him, while others are non-committal. The metropolitan papers of the country without a single exception, so far as the News has been, have spoken in the most scathing terms of the silver-tongued statesman. —(Pulchre) News.

DEMOCRATIC TICKET.

FOR STATE SENATOR,

J. H. HOLLOWAY,

OF CLARK.

FOR REPRESENTATIVE,

W. C. TAYLOR,

OF MENEFEE.

FOR SCHOOL SUPERINTENDENT,

I. N. HORTON.

Register to-day.

The United States Senate was the scene of an exciting debate between Mr. Wolcott and Mr. Gordon Wednesday the latter, indignant at the former's reference to him as the "steerer" of the repeal bill and speaking with much feeling, accused the Colorado Senator of eavesdropping at the doors of the committee rooms "through himself or his agents." Afterward Mr. Gordon modified his language and peace again reigned.

On Wednesday last, the motion to set aside the judgment of the Montgomery Circuit Court in appointing the Columbia Finance and Trust Company Trustees of the New Farmers Bank, was heard and dismissed. After the adjournment of the Court, Col. Thomas Turner, at the request of a large number of interested hearers, made a speech from the steps of the Tyler-Apperson block, in which he severely arraigned some of the attorneys engaged in the case. His withering words of denunciation and contempt were scathing, indeed, and the charges he made, and which he stated he was able to prove, were such as to confirm the community, in an already only too widespread opinion, that a man did not have to be a member of the legislature to sell out.

If the charges are false, it took the tongue of a most malicious slanderer to frame them; if true, no words have meaning enough to paint the gnat's ome in their true colors. It does not need to be said, the attorney who will betray a client in one case will betray another when like opportunity offers. A gentleman said to me a few days since, "Ed C. Orser, Thomas Turner and Reid Rogers came out of this case with clean hands, and more firmly rooted in the confidence of the community than they have ever been." It can further be said to the credit of the men, themselves, and to the honor of the exalted positions they have occupied, that the two ex-Chief Justices of Kentucky, Judges B. J. Peters and W. H. Holt, who were in the cases, have not the smell of fire on their garments, nor is there an suspicion that either have an itching palm.

The name of Mr. W. C. Taylor, of Menefee, for Representative, appears at the head of our columns. He is the Democratic nominee, and right rightly will he find the Democracy of Montgomery rally to his support. Mr. Taylor is a good Democrat, and one who, we are assured, will do his best to serve the people of his district to the very utmost of his ability. He is a business man who, by industry, economy and honesty, has won a competency. He began his life with little of this world's goods and comparatively few friends able to aid him in his struggles, but his course has been such that he has not only gained money, but what is far better, a reputation among his fellow-men for fidelity and uprightness. We repeat he will do his utmost to make us a creditable Representative.

Mr. I. N. Horton has won the race for Democratic nominee for Superintendent of Schools of Montgomery, and he will be elected by a handsome majority. Esquire Horton has served on the Board of Magistrates of Montgomery county and the people know him. He is our nominee and the people are going to support him. The talked-of contest on the part of one of the defeated candidates is all nonsense. The fact that he held the office of Magistrate at the time he was nominated is no bar to that nomination. Horton is our nominee and the people will make him their next Superintendent of Schools. Moreover, the County Committee will be but a few minutes disposing of any notice of a contest on such flimsy grounds as has been proposed. Horton got the votes, he is our nominee, we are going to elect him, and that's all there is in it.

Register to-day.

The Trusteeship of the New Farmers Bank.

We had occasion last week to express our opinion of the appointment of the Columbia Finance and Trust Company as Trustee of the New Farmers Bank. What has developed since has only served to strengthen us in our opinion, and the community is almost a unit in regarding the appointment in quite as unfavorable light as we. The thing is done, and we fear, cannot now be undone; therefore we sincerely hope we may be mistaken in our estimate of the mischief that will come upon this county because of this appointment. But we want it distinctly understood we have no apologies to make for anything we may have felt called upon to say, or may hereafter find it in our way to express, about this or any other matter, we may feel is inimical to the best interests of the people among whom we live. We are for our own people against outsiders, politically, financially or socially, first, last and all the time. If this is wrong, make the most of it. We are simply built that way and cannot help it—in fact we do not desire to do so. The appointment was a disastrous one in our judgment for the financial interests of the county. We have said so and think the results will fully justify us in using much more pronounced expressions of disapproval than we have yet found necessary to do. We shall see, what we shall see.

Register to-day.

How are the ADVOCATE editors pleased with the candidates nominated last Saturday? He honest about it, brothers, and tell your readers just what you think. Are these candidates the "very best" that were before the people?

The will of the majority is the supreme law in the Democratic party. It is the ADVOCATE pleased with the nominations last Saturday?—Sentinel-Democrat.

The ADVOCATE tenders its sincerest sympathy to Brother Casidy in his disappointment at his defeat. We hope he may have better luck next time.

Johnson of Indiana showed some of his dirt last week when for an unnamable utterance Mr. Breckinridge said "I dismise the gentleman by a wave of the hand" he responded "There is another thing you would like the people to dismise, but they won't." Such an utterance under such circumstances is a true indication of the character of a man who is not even worthy of contempt. Johnson has lowered himself by his utterance in the estimation of all brave and courageous men. Not able to stand in debate with Mr. Breckinridge, he resorts to a cowardly attack.

Ex-Secretary Whitney has written a letter refuting some published charges in regard to the appointment of Mr. James Van Allen as ambassador to Italy. He quotes a letter that he wrote to the President last May concerning the proposed appointment, in which he told the President there was no obligation upon him growing out of the campaign to appoint any one to any office. A letter from Mr. Van Allen is also quoted, in which he refers to the charges as utterly false.

Congressman Oates made an elaborate argument Friday before the House Committee on Banking and Currency in support of his bill repealing the 10 per cent. tax on State banks. The bill provides for Federal supervision, with a limitation of what has been declared by the courts to be a lawful Federal tax. One clause declares the aggregate amount of State bank issues shall not exceed $5 per capita of the population of the State.

It matters not who the ADVOCATE may have thought were the "very best" men before the recent primary for Democratic nominees for the Legislature and County Superintendent of Public Schools. The majority of Democrats have indicated their choice, and their names are found at the head of our columns as Democratic nominees and we stand ready to champion the cause of these same Democratic nominees.

"While Serving My Country I was taken ill with spinal disease and rheumatism. When I returned home my trouble was still with me, and I was confined to my bed, unable to help myself for 23 months. After taking seven bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla I was well and have not since been troubled with my old complaint. My wife was in ill health, suffering with headache, dizziness and dyspepsia. She took two bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla and feels like a new woman." JAMES A. WHEELER, 1200 Division St., Baltimore, Md.

MT. STERLING, KY., Sept. 30, '93. EDITOR MT. STERLING ADVOCATE: SIRS—May I take enough of your valuable space to say a word to the Democrats of Montgomery and Menefee about the recent primary for Representative?

I am too much gratified by the handsome majority given me by the Democrats of this county, notwithstanding my very brief canvass and the misrepresentations of my opponents, to indulge in any naked reflections. The disadvantages under which I labored are understood by everyone, and that I need every fair means to adjust all differences is equally well known. I have no regrets personally, having prosecuted the canvass in a perfectly fair and honorable way.

That the general public may not be misled by the statements in the last issue of the Sentinel-Democrat, I have sought this opportunity to say that the implied charge that I used money to buy votes, or combined with any other candidate, is absolutely false. I did not, nor did any friends, use a single dollar to buy a vote, and it is a well known fact that in the precinct in this county where there is the largest "floating" vote, and where Mr. Taylor used his money and secured the vote which nominated him, that he worked in conjunction with one of the candidates for Superintendent.

After declining a fair proposition to settle the matter between us in this county, and manifesting a decided intention to compass my defeat, when he must have known his own success was impossible, Mr. Casidy might have been generous enough to have treated me justly after his object was accomplished. His effort to account for his own defeat by making indirect charges, which are false, confirms the good sense of the Democrats in refusing to make him their standard-bearer.

My heart is full of gratitude to the good Democrats of Montgomery and the few faithful friends of Menefee for their generous support, and I will cherish with a lasting and tender regard those warm personal friends who made my cause their own.

Very truly yours,

H. R. FRENCH.

A disastrous prairie fire occurred in the west part of the Cherokee strip and scores of settlers lost their property, and narrowly escaped with their lives. Mrs. J. S. Keeney and her two children were burned to death. Two children of Mrs. George Harrison are missing, and it is feared they also perished. Mrs. Thompson and two children were fatally burned.

$2 For $1.50.

We call special attention to our dubbing arrangement with the great southern weekly, the Atlanta Constitution, which enables us to offer both papers for the remarkably low sum of $1.50 a year. The first duty of every good citizen is to patronize his home paper. He wishes to become thoroughly conversant with his county matters, and only through his home paper can he expect to be supplied with the current county news, which is of the closest interest to him.

After he has provided himself with his home paper, the next consideration of those who are not within easy reach of a first-class daily newspaper should be to select a first-class weekly newspaper supplying all of the world, and paying special attention to features which are of particular interest to the household and the farm.

Just such a paper is the Weekly Constitution, published at Atlanta, Ga., and having a circulation of 156,000 copies a week, the largest of any weekly newspaper published in America. It is essentially a farmer's paper and stands at the head of the weekly press of this country. Its agricultural department alone is worth the subscription price of the paper, while its numbers among its contributors such well known names as Bret Harte, Mark Twain, Joel Chandler Harris, Sarge Plunkett, Bill Arp, and a host of others, whose reputations are world wide. Its women and children's departments are prepared with a special view to please the little folks and the women, and its news columns literally cover the face of the earth.

At its next regular meeting the City Council will receive sealed bids for delinquent taxes due the city of Mt. Sterling up to date. The Council reserves the right to reject any and all bids. BEN. R. TURNER, City Clerk.

At Lexington, Ky., it is thought that the failure of the Granite State Bank, at Exeter, N. H., will affect the Lexington Water Works Company. J. F. Putnam, President of the Lexington Company, was also President of the Granite Bank.

There was right sharp trading in wool coats at Lancaster Monday. M. S. Baghman bought ten more coats at $55 to $75, and J. M. Glover, of Pulaski, bought a bunch of horse coats at $30 to $35. There was very little doing in other branches of trade.—Danville Advocate.

The Court of Appeals has decided that there is no authority for the customary delay of thirty days in the appellate clerk's issuance of the mandate of the court in criminal cases. The decision sets aside old precedents, and tapers into effect will materially alter criminal practice.

The bill for public buildings at this place is being pushed by congressman Lisle. He has amended it so as to ask for $50,000 instead of $25,000 and it will reach the committee the latter part of this month. Mr. Lisle is putting in good work for his district.

In view of the unusual activity lately of train robbers, armed men will hereafter accompany all mail and express trains leaving Chicago for the East and South. The Pennsylvania railroad will arm its trainmen, and it is understood that the Rock Island, the Wabash and the Illinois Central will take the same precautions.

The call notes of a scattered crowd of Bob White's were heard in town Monday. They will very likely be more of rarity this season than ever before known in this section. It is to be regretted that steps have not been taken to protect them from gunners, snipers and trappers until they have become moderately plentiful again.—Owingsville Outlook.

Near Harrodsburg, Jink Renfrow, Hope Wright and William Shoe-maker were digging a well and at the distance of one hundred and thirty feet applied dynamite when an explosion occurred from gas igniting it and seriously burning all three. The two first named are fatally injured and the latter will probably recover.

John C. Wood Post Master of Mt. Sterling Post office has sent to Mr. Cleveland his resignation to take effect as soon as his successor has been appointed and qualified. Mr. Wood has made an efficient and courteous officer and we have had no fault to find in his management but as a politician he is greatly deformed and had no business with an office under a democratic administration.

Miss Jennie Walcott of Lancaster has brought suit against Prof. J. E. Harry of the Georgetown College in the Scott Circuit Court for $10,000 damages. Mrs. Harry had boarded at the Lancaster Hotel of which Miss Walcott was housekeeper and while there had stolen from her room some valuables and accused Miss Walcott of theft. An officer searched her room and nothing was found and thence the suit.

W. B. O'Connell and John F. King attended the meeting of the Y. M. I. at Cincinnati last week. They reached home on Thursday evening very much delighted with their pleasant trip. Mr. O'Connell was elected First Grand Vice-President, an honor worthily bestowed on a worthy man.

John Kearns, Sr., aged 80 years, died from cancer of the stomach on last Wednesday. He was held in high esteem wherever known. His remains were taken to Mayville for interment. He leaves three children, John, Miss Mary, of this county, and Thomas Kearns, of New Decatur, Alabama.

Mr. H. V. Sanders, the Secretary and Treasurer of the Columbia Finance and Trust Company, is now in charge of the affairs of the New Farmers Bank. Mr. Sanders will be here for some time, or till he gets the matters pertaining to the bank straightened out. Interested parties are advised to read the notice of the Columbia Trust Company in this issue.

Buck Bridges and Sherman Barnes, both negroes, indulged in a cutting contest on Sunday evening, on Main street, near Queen. They used the "cutted gen'man's" favorite weapon, the "razor." Bridges received a severe gash in the right arm, laying open the muscle to the bone, and Barnes was cut on the head and neck. Neither will die. Both were put in Jim Beale's cooler after having their wounds sewed up. Their examining trial was set for Wednesday. As usual, a woman in the case.

News from Washington seems to indicate that the compromise talk is daily becoming more pronounced. It is believed that the abandonment of the managers of the repeal bill of their scarcely concealed intention to force an issue this week may be the basis for a great deal of this talk, but a prominent Democratic Senator, who has been identified from the beginning with the movement to reconcile the conflict of opinion between the two elements in his party, is said to be confidently expressing the opinion that an early date, probably some time this week, a compromise will be reached, by the terms of which the silver dollar now in the Treasury will be coined during a period of about four years; that a sufficient amount of silver will be purchased from time to time to bring the total silver circulation up to $900,000,000; that bonds will be issued sufficient to bring the gold reserve up to $300,000,000 and that the bank circulation is to be extended to the par value of bonds deposited to secure their circulation.

THE WAYSIDE PUMP.

"Shake hands," says the way-side pump—
Best of friends on a sunny day.
And sweetest talker you ever knew,
He speaks through his nose in a careless way.
That would make a prosaic pump
"Shake hands." How his arm cracks
Stretches out as you draw a sign
"Shake hands!" How his arm cracks
To pour you on, as much as smoke,
A sweeter nectar than you could buy.
What do you doubt it's only try?
Take this cup from the rusty nail,
Hold it under the quivering spout,
Well, how goes it, this Adam's ale?
Pump away, you can't pump him out.
Burst like his voice made for all.
Three full cups? Ah! you need not tell
Whether you like him or not.

So he stands by the dusty way—
God's own lander—and seems to say,
"Drink your fill, there is naught to pay!"
Thirty horses, with no way out,
Plunge their heads in his mossy throat,
Drink, and crop from the cool wellside
A hush of grass—and then amble off,
And now the dew chased even, come,
And drain the pump at a single draft.
That great eye-browed, nose and snout,
And thank the pump for the nectar quaffed.
The smoking sun, with the sun's gleam,
Leaving their eyes that way—
Then, oh, shall drink for the first time,
And the untimely nose like the cool,
Sweet stream from the spout that springs
Like a fountain from a mossy gash.
The farmer's dog with his belling tongue,
Bells the all around the well's mouth.
Then the grunting wheels from the rat
And the fragrant load away from the hill.

Dear old way-side friend,
Dying in thy time and place,
Of cheer as a man's life,
Of driving with simple grace,
Of giving back to the heart to spend,
Would that I were so true.
As thou art pump on thy humble plan,
Out of my hands I would not turn,
Of my heart's sweet love would flow,
And the all around the well's mouth.
And every pillar with their aspect,
Would stop to bless me and to be true.
James, Backus in York's Companion.

THE DIVER'S TRAP.

Everybody knows Old Point Comfort, Fort Monroe, Newport News, the Rip Eads and Hampton Roads—at least on the maps and in the history of the city.

The story I'm going to tell had its scenes in that locality, chiefly under the waters of Hampton Roads, and the time runs through nearly three centuries.

On a black, stormy night in 1739 there came sailing in past Hampton a Spanish caravel, the El Dorado, carrying 10,000 ounces of gold in ingots of 50 pounds each.

The don in command looked in vain over the black, seething waste of water for a light of a boat that might have on board a diver to strike the gold.

He paced the gallery to all the high prowed ship, called on all the saints and tore his hair out in handfuls.

All the time the varved drove on the storm struck the reef, where the ripples were constructed long afterward.

Next morning she had disappeared. No one had seen her. The survivor of the crew was washed to shore and lay dead to all appearance. Not a soul in the world knew that a rich treasure ship had been in the spot.

Old Louis Perano was the oldest man living anywhere on Maryland east shore. He had been born there and his father before him. They were not of the ancient Maryland stock. A tradition went that the first Perano known there was of Spanish blood, old Louis Perano's great-grandfather.

Louis Perano himself showed no trace of such ancestry. The young grandson—likewise a Louis Perano—had an olive complexion, black curly hair, large brilliant dark eyes, and the haughty nose of the original Perano, whose portrait hung in the old parlor of the manor house. The intermarriages had all been with the early English colonial families. Perano had fought in both wars—the Revolution and the Civil War—and in the last four men of the family had given their lives, and now, in 1872, the old grandfather and the young grandson comprised the whole race. Not a man nor woman else was left of the Peranos.

This October evening the two sat on the old, dilapidated veranda. It had an outlook on the Atlantic, and white winged cliffs were dimming the waves in the moonlight.

"Louis," said the old grandfather suddenly, laying down his pipe, "you love the sea, and I am going to tell you a sea story. Every Perano loves the sea, but for 200 years I know of one only that has been a sailor."

"I am going to tell you of that Perano and of his ship," said the young grandson, "and you may tell your son some day. Still I don't think you will. I think it will be no longer private family history by the time you are gray headed."

"It was in 1729 that the El Dorado, 20 guns, Don Louis Juan de Aguilero Perano commander, was selected to convey from the Peruvian and Mexican mines an immense treasure in gold and gems home to the king of Spain.

that he had come from a ship. His speech was Spanish—that was all that remained of his identity. He learned English as he recovered, forgetting his Spanish utterances.

"He was a fine, handsome man, with a proud air of command. He remained in the family—it was here on this estate—and married the daughter, and the manor house has come down to us, as you know, from them."

"When he was a very old man, he was one day at a barn raising, and by an accident a strange turn of circumstance a falling beam struck him on the head. The injury was a fatal one at his advanced age, but it restored the memories he had lost for 37 years."

"To his oldest son he gave his history and his name. He told them that he had sworn to take on board the El Dorado the king's treasure and guard it and deliver it at Barcelona. The memory of the oath on the crucifix seemed to haunt him with terrifying distinctness. He laid commands on his son to guard the secret like a monumental stone in a dusty crypt, and to transmit it to his son, and so it was to do down until such time as the treasure could be recovered and restored to the sovereignty of Spain."

"A very interesting story, grandpapa," said the young Louis, speaking now for the first time. "So we are of noble blood. He was a graduate of Spain. Blue blood! Well, now, grandfather, you know I don't care for such distinctions."

"Be silent, Louis," said the old man sternly. "To deny the value of blood is ignorance indeed." And then he went on: "None of us has been able to attempt the recovery of this treasure. Nor have we seen how it was ever to be possible in the future. But lately I have read of divers who go down to the bottom of the sea and perform wonderful feats there. I feel an old man's presentiment regarding you, Louis—that you are the one of the race to reclaim the gold to Spain. Swear it to me, Louis."

"Indeed, grandfather, I cannot do any such thing," interrupted the boy. "If you say it is a point of family honor, to try to restore this fabulous treasure, I'll promise to do my best, but I'll not swear it."

After a moment the eager look faded out of the old man's eyes. He sighed, and the boy saw that the boy was looking at him fearfully, and he was struck by the resemblance to the old portrait over the mantel piece, a fine, tall, muscular young man, with a hawk-like nose and a lion's leonine expression. "The Perano were never promise breakers," he said. Then he added: "Among my papers is a rough chart drawn by Don Louis. It shows the way to it, pass it on to your son."

One morning in 1874 a curious looking craft sailed in past the capes and anchored in Hampton Roads, about two lengths from the rips. Its commander was a fine looking boy about 18, and the crew were 12 stout Cape Codders. On board were diver's outfits, planks, barrels, chains, windlasses, coils of rope and some queer engines.

The young captain at once set all hands at work. Drags were got out, and the bottom of the sea was swept by a circular space of five acres. A very old chart was consulted for bearings, but as it was made from memory by an old man at point of death it was liable to be in error.

The graphing line brought up nothing of any value, but young Louis Perano—for of course it was he—was not a whit discouraged.

He had a small old manor house and the Perano and Perano after his grandfather's death and had gone north into the employ of a famous diver. For three years he had been in the heavy work at well date in New York harbor. After that he had been a voyage to Spain.

"A young captain," as he was called, put on a diver's suit and went to the bottom. Tom Newell, his diver, accompanied him. The trip was apparently fruitless. They had trouble with a current near the bottom, which ran very fast at flood tide and made it difficult to keep their feet. They found the bed of the roads swept bare of mud in some places; in others covered with loose bowlders. Sand had been piled in the banks by the action of the tides. In some places the water was clear as crystal, in others turbid and muddy.

There the young captain began to study. He anchored buoy at the corner of a square took observations of these changes of place from the flood and ebb tides and from the currents. He spent hours under water examining the contour of the bottom. With Newell he made a map showing all the details for an area of about 10 acres.

I will tell Tom Newell step in here and tell the rest of the story:

We worked for about 30 days at the charting. The weather was mild and the water in the Roads comparatively still, and we had had little to hinder us. We had the usual experience with large fish at the bottom. One day a school of dogfish swarmed around. These fellows are snappy customers, for they are armed with two sharp jagged bones near the tail, and a slash from one of them is serious. They are cannibals too. If one of their number is hurt, the other fellows gobble him up.

Sticks, mud, and net man eaters. One big fellow, however, was so persistent that I suspected he might belong to the man devouring breed.

Perano was down with me, but I could not see him. The visitor turned out to be a blue shark and a dangerous customer. He came up rather close, and I felt rather shaky as he eyed me. A noise near me made me turn my head. There was Perano, with his big cheese knife in his hand, making a slash at the sea wolf that had him open. They hauled us up, and that ended the day's work for Tom Newell.

Perano did not seem to mind it at all. For a young chap, devoid of fear, that fellow took the cake. The crew stood in awe of him, boy though he was. He had a way of looking steadily with his big eyes like the black African lions. Yet he was as gentle as a girl. Well, we raked, and raked the bottom, but got only old iron.

You'd think Perano would have given in with disgust. But he got more and more hopeful, though it was going on two months, and he was paying out big wages.

He never communicated his conclusions to me, so I was to some extent working in the dark. I tell you I was almost devoured with curiosity. We tried to guess that it was a search for treasure. The old sailor in Norfolk and the people along shore had never heard of any ship being lost thereabouts.

"Well, there we are! We got big wages, all of us. I told you. Ten dollars a day was my figure. The grub was excellent, the schooner nicely fitted up, and taken altogether it wasn't a bad trip. We got a cargo of stone from Norfolk."

All at once we went on a new tack. There was a low reef at the outer side of the square we had marked out, about 500 yards away from the rips. Before the raps were we had struck the regular current at the bottom must have set differently. At least I thought so and told Perano. He nodded in a pleased way. As I made it out, the work on the new tack was to discover how the tide ran in former years. That was what Perano was working out. I was sure, for suddenly we were set to building a trap. We got a cargo of stone from Norfolk.

Why didn't the government interfere? Well, however he got it, Perano had a permit from the secretary of war, or some one up there in Washington, and none of the authorities gave us any trouble.

A nice, dark skinned man came to visit us once or twice, and I learned afterward that he was the Spanish minister. He joked a good deal with Louis in his own language and laughed. I really think the old gentleman was of my opinion and believed we were chasing rainbows.

Well, we built two curving walls at an angle of about 70 degrees and left the angle open. One of these walls ran over the whole of the reef. The other was shorter, and we used dynamite, and in front of the line we anchored a big, curiously shaped dragger, called a dredge.

Each of these walls was about 1,000 feet in length. There was no current there when we finished, and the water was 20 fathoms deep. I began to see dimly that we had changed the current and sent it over the old course through the big mud bar. The flood tide washing in from the capes met this current, and at one stage of the tide sent it in a circle clear round the raps.

The mud was finally broken up. The water was muddier for a month. During that time we men took a rest, but Perano spent most of his fixing up an electrical apparatus with a galvanometer. He lowered a telegraphic telegraph cable into it—and connected it with the big iron wedge shaped dredge. Then he fixed up about a hundred glass jars into an electric battery.

Jim Bidle had charge of the dredge, and his instructions were to go out about half a mile toward the capes in a line with the raps every day and dredge inward until past the schooner.

It was then Perano began to sit in his cabin with his eyes on the galvanometer.

All at once there appeared to be a great change in the lid. He was irritable and would allow no one in his cabin. When I asked if he desired me to go down to the bottom and take a look around, his eyes fairly blazed, and he looked like a young panther about to spring. But at all once he softened and reached out his hand.

"No, Tom," he said quietly. "There's no use. We are near the end of our work."

For the life of me I couldn't say if he'd found treasure or not. He could tell nothing from his face.

Well, we staid there and swept 10 acres of the bottom with the wedge shaped dredge, but never a thing was sent down to see if we had raked anything into the ditch we had dug with the dynamite.

Then the crew was paid off. They thought the whole thing a failure. The schooner ran into Norfolk. The dredge was broken up. The schooner was sent back to New Bedford. Perano took lodgings in town. He kept me on all wages and sent for a complete new outfit for two divers.

By this time we were not through with the search. We also got a new machine for sending down air which we ourselves could control at the bottom. Some of these things I don't care to talk about, for he made over all the ideas to me, and I am going to have them patented. I can give up diving then, for I'll be a rich man.

He seemed to be looking all the time for letters, and at the end of a month a big envelope was brought by a man who looked the typical Spanish don all over. It was addressed to "Don Luis de Aguilero de Perano, duke of Castellan, care of Louis Perano, Hotel Atlanta, Norfolk, Va., United States of America."

The Spanish minister, the same nice old fellow, who I joked so when he came down from Washington, Perano, came down into secret session. The three went into secret session.

The result of the "powwow" was apparent a week later. A Spanish gubnat ran in under the lee of the capes and came to anchor. We went aboard, and I'm blessed if the whole crew, officers and all, didn't turn out to receive us and give us a salute. Perano had a talk with the captain, and the next day the gubnat anchored right over the spot where our schooner would lie. Our traps were brought off in a boat, and Perano himself went down to the bottom with the air.

He sent up in the grappling iron instead of three weeks nearly 2,000 bars of gold, each weighing about 50 pounds, besides several iron rods as clean as a tooth comb, and raked everything into our ditch where it lay sunk at the bottom. And I'm blessed if there wasn't a galvanometer hadn't rung a bell every time the dredge struck a bar of gold, so that Perano sitting in his cabin in the old schooner had known he had the treasure safe enough. There it lay at the bottom of our trap to be fished up at leisure and stored away in the hold of the gubnat in big steel boxes.

They told me the Spanish government gave him half the find, that he is now a grandee, whatever that is, and that his right name is Perano, and that he got back all the lands and castles of some ancestor who lost that lot of treasure long ago in Hampton Roads.

As I told you, Perano was a generous young chap, and when he was going away to Spain he gave me a check for $5,000 over and above my wages. Louis Perano, U. S. A., in Chicago Inter Ocean.

Turkey's Formidable Guns. In 1478 Mohammed II, in forming the siege of Scutari in Albania, employed 14 heavy bombards, the lightest of which threw a stone shot of 370 pounds weight, two sent shots of 500 pounds, one of 750 pounds, one of 850 pounds, one of 1,200 pounds, five of 1,500 and one of the enormous weight of 1,640 pounds, enormous even in these days, for the only guns whose shots exceed the heaviest of these are our 30 ton guns, throwing shots of 1,700 pound projectile, our 100 ton, throwing one of 2,000 pounds, and the 110 ton, throwing an 1,800 pound shot with a high velocity.

The stone shot of Mohammed's guns was really for the first time in diameter, about the height of a dining table; 2,534 of them fired on this occasion weighing, according to a statement of General Lefroy's, about 1,000 tons, and were sent out of the solid rock on the spot. Assuming 24 inches as the average diameter of the shot fired at the siege, the total area of the surface traversed by the shot was 12,000 square feet. At this siege the weight of the powder fired is estimated by General Lefroy to have been 350 tons. At the siege of Rhodes the Turkish guns caused 16 bombards or double cannon to be cast on the spot, throwing balls 2 to 3 feet in diameter—Chambers' Journal.

Making Money With Ease. "An old farmer came into my office not long ago and sat down," said an Alabama banker. "I was putting my signature to some blank bills received from the treasury—the usual form, you know, from the treasury department. The old farmer watched me for a few moments and asked: 'What is that?'

"I handed him one of the sheets. He looked at the blank bills and said: 'This is money?'

"Yes," I said.

"Is that the way you make it?" he asked.

"Yes," said I.

"My goldminty!" he said and walked out without another word."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Gross Carelessness. "I'll never forget Bill Timmins," said the man who used to live in the far northwest. "Bill was as game a man as ever lived and too generous to take advantage."

"Isn't he living now?" asked the listener, who had been a good deal impressed by the sadness of the narrative as ever lived and too generous to take advantage."

"No, I was on the coroner's jury that looked after Bill."

"What—er—what was the verdict?" "Dead of carelessness!" "Carelessness! How?" "Got into a fight without a gun on him."—Exchange.

Bringing the Company to Terms

A German saloon keeper wanted electric lights, and applied to an electric light company not a hundred miles from New York. This company was operating its station on the "fixed charge" system: that is, so much per month, whether the lights burned one candle or a hundred.

"I don't want to pay for what I don't use," said the German about electric meters, and that was what he wanted. "I pay for what I get, and 'no more,'" said he. "You put me in a medlar alley, aber I don't get me no lights." Now, it happened the company had no meters, but as it was either lose a customer or put in a meter, they proceeded to make one. The works of the house were torn up, and a meter and placed in a wooden box, which was fastened to the wall in the back part of the saloon, with instructions that it mustn't be touched. The Recent Medical Absurdities.

The latest medical absurdity is the use of "organic extracts," prepared from various vital organs, and intended for the relief of diseases affecting similar organs of human beings. Thus for brain and nervous troubles we have a preparation of brain juice under the head of "Cerebrine;" for cardiac affections a liquid extracted from the heart, some one who has no fear for the future, has suggested, and named as a reliable cure under the name of "Cardine," and the list is capable of indefinite extension. These are not ordinary quack medicines like those advertised so widely in the daily newspapers, but are introduced and recommended by regular physicians of well-known reputation. It seems strange that any educated person should believe in any quack remedy, which is a direct reproach to the medical science of the middle ages, and in opposition to all the results of modern investigations; but thankless, both professional and unprofessional, is characterized by credulity, and we expect to see the "organic extracts" flourish for a few weeks or months, and then quietly disappear, as John Brown-Séquard's "Elixir of Life" did.

It is a pity that the "organic extracts" are not injected of sulphureted byres¹ and various other renowned cures which are now as dead as the patients to whom they were administered.—Popular Science Monthly.

Salt Sweetens Sugar

A member of the Physiological Society of Berlin definitely explains the masking of sugar sweetened by the addition of salt. From his experiments he concludes that if a solution of sugar the taste of which is not sweetened, will be added a slight amount of salt and water, so weak that it excites no saline taste, the result is extra sweetening of the sugared water. The weakest of quinine solution is said also to produce similar results. The explanation given of the above seeming incongruity is that the ever so feeble salty bitterness imparts an increasing sensibility to the sensation of taste by the simultaneous stimuli, and hence an appreciation of additional sweeteners.

THE ADVOCATE.

SOME EARNEST WORDS AS TO LYNCHING.

Everybody can see that lynching grows worse and worse. Such practices are contagious. Public description of one case suggests another, where it might not have been thought of. What in the world will this lead to? As a permanent and growing practice, lynching must be destructive of civilization. Is this statement too broad? Think a moment and see if it would not be so.

Now the apology for lynching must lie in one of two things: Some say that our laws and our courts are to be relied on to punish as outrageous criminals ought to be punished. Others tell us that lynching will be more likely to strike terror into brutish criminals, than the slow and dull processes of law.

As to the last point, I gravely doubt whether the view is correct. Even the lowest of mankind are not brutes. They have some notions of right and wrong; something of what we call conscience. If you try to restrain such a man from great crimes only by fear of lynching, you excite the brutish elements in him, and do not appeal to the human elements. He thinks to himself, that if he gets caught he will be lynched, and he simply rages at the thought, and really considers himself as in such a case the innocent party. Besides, he hopes to escape. He feels cunning. He thinks may be some other fellow will be caught and lynched. Everybody knows that this does sometimes happen, though the parties engaged in lynching naturally cover it up after the mistake is ascertained. The tempted criminal grins to think how some other fellow may be swung up while he goes free. Altogether it is a form of punishment that does not strike terror, certainly not so much as many seem to imagine. On the other hand, if law is properly administered, there is something about it that appeals to the human in a tempted wretch. I was glad to see the Courier-Journal the other day expressing a similar persuasion. The idea of having all the facts searched out and proved against him, having his guilt fully established, and then having to wait for weeks, with a knowledge that at last he will be hung, there is really something more terrible about this than attaches to the prospect of lynching.

But the great trouble is, people say that the laws are sometimes inadequate, the punishment provided is not severe enough, and, especially, the lawyers can manage to have guilty men escape if there is any money in the case. Now there is some ground for this view. There has been a tendency, in recent generations, to tone down the punishment for the lightest offenses, and to sympathize with, or pity, a vile criminal as rather unfortunate than guilty. There is a sort of sentimentality abroad in regard to criminals, by no means universal, but pretty widely diffused. And it can not be denied that some lawyers are slow to delay a case until public indignation has subsided, and then, perhaps, the guilty man may go free, or may encounter only a modified punishment. Lawyers are like the prophet's fig—the good are very good and the bad are very bad. Some of the noblest men in the world are judges and lawyers; but those who yield to certain temptations of their calling, sometimes become very bad men, and our processes of trial, designed to save men from hasty condemnation and excessive penalties, are not unfrequently manipulated in the interest of the guilty. What then?

Suppose that some horrid crime has been committed; some outrageous arson, or murder, or rape. When hasty spirits propose lynching, the plea is always made, that the courts cannot be relied on. Now suppose that instead of lynching, a public meeting should be held, in which many thoughtful and judicious citizens take part. Let the prima facie facts be stated in the meeting; let a large committee be appointed, representing different classes of the community, according to the circumstances of the case; and a smaller Executive committee; let the meeting urge, and the committee see to it, that the case shall be pushed along without any undue delay; let the lower grade of lawyers perceive that public opinion will not tolerate any tricks of delay; let a second meeting be held, if necessary, or at any rate let the committee make itself felt, insisting upon promptness and pain-taking justice; thus the high wrought feelings of the community would find expression in a way tending to speedy results, while yet the requisites, to civilized justice would be respected and observed.

I have mentioned that the law sometimes fails to impose adequate penalties. The most offensive of all crimes, the one that oftentimes occasions lynching, is quite differently punished in different States. By the help of my friend, Judge W. O. Harris, I offer the following facts as to the penalty of rape in the Southern States—not stopping to point out the distinction made in some States, according to the age of the victim: In Arkansas, Florida, Louisiana and North Carolina it is punished by death; in Alabama, and Kentucky by death, or confinement in the penitentiary for life, in the discretion of the jury; in Georgia, Maryland, Missouri, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia and West Virginia by death, or confinement in the penitentiary for a term of years, in the discretion of the jury; in Mississippi by confinement in the penitentiary for life; in South Carolina by confinement in the penitentiary for a term of not less than ten years. Now if any think that in their State the penalty is inadequate—as I must confess I think in regard to several of the cases mentioned—let them earnestly work to get their Legislature. That may do a great deal, and can not do any great harm.

Besides the general evil of lynching upon which I will not enlarge, there are two special evils appertaining to the practice in our Southern States. I write as a Southern man, having spent my life successively in Virginia, South Carolina and Kentucky. We Southern white people are trying to deal with the most formidable problem that civilized mankind ever had to face. Besides a great many ignorant white people, we have this mighty mass of colored people. We must not forget that the negroes differ widely among themselves, having come from different races in Africa, and having had very different relations to the white people while held in slavery. Many of them are greatly superior to others in character, but the great mass of them belong to a very low grade of humanity. We have to deal with them as best we can, while a large number of other white people stand off at a distance and scold us. Not a few of our fellow citizens at the North feel and act very nobly about the matter; but the number is sadly great who do nothing and seem to care nothing but to find fault. Now, from the very nature of the case, most of the crimes which among us have been punished in this epidemic of lynching have been crimes committed by negroes. When a negro murders a white man, or outrages a white woman or child, it excites in us a wrath all the greater because of race feeling. Every white person in the United States would feel the same way if placed in the same circumstances, except some few who fancy they ought not to feel so, and then persuade themselves that they do not. If a negro brute outrages a white girl, maybe a child, it stirs in us white men a wrath almost intolerable. But here we are with these great and rightful difficulties confronting us and impending conflict. Now, if we go on lynching, and when Northern newspapers complain, we merely rake up cases of Northern lynchings, too, and defend ourselves by saying: "you are another," we tend to repress the sympathy of the better class of our Northern fellow-citizens. If we can stop the lynching and administer prompt, even and real and civilized justice, then the people at the North will more and more sympathize with our grave difficulties, and in many ways will help us as we strive to overcome them.

Besides, there is the public opinion of the colored people themselves. Some of the educated negroes are demagogues, and it would be wonderful if they were not; it would be a new reason for questioning the unity of the human race, if they were so different from the white folk. But there is a goodly number of intelligent negroes who really take sound and wholesome views of the situation. If we continue to tolerate lynching, with black men the victims in nine cases out of ten, we lead these better negroes to think that we are enemies of all their race. If we do not provoke race conflicts, we alienate the better class from the support of justice and government and civilization.

Now, then, I appeal to thoughtful men wherever the Courier-Journal is read, will you not come out and condemn this business of lynching? Will you not openly discourage and oppose and stop it? We can stop it. Is not this our duty? Is it not high time? I respectfully ask editors of other papers to publish some part of this article, or to write something about the matter. I ask intelligent people all over the South to reflect upon the subject, to tone up public opinion by their conversation. Men and women the thing is wrong, and getting worse, and tending to be ruinous. I pray you think, speak out, act in such ways as you deem wisest.

I will not apologise for publishing this respectful appeal. As a minister of religion, I take no part in the manipulations of party politics, though careful to vote at every election, since voting is surely one of the highest duties of an American citizen. But this is in no sense a question of party politics. It is a question of justice, of fundamental right, of essential civilization, of human welfare.—Dr. John A. Broadus, in the Courier-Journal.

LAND, STOCK AND CROP.

In Clark county, J. B. Wilson sold his 100-acre farm, near Hunt, to Jas. Reid and Jas. Bubank for $3,300.

The price of wheat is advancing slowly, and will advance more rapidly as the money market becomes easier. At Flemingsburg court about 200 mule colts were on the market, ranging from $15 to $50. Mountain cattle sold at 1 1/2 to 2 cents. Good horses at good prices.

At Lancaster court there was good trade in mule colts, but little doing in other branches of trade. 10 mare colts sold at $55 to $75; a bunch of horse colts at $30 to $35.

Robert M. Hunter has shipped 1,500 bushels of Jessamine clover seed bought for Cincinnati parties, engaged at $5 per bushel. Since the decline in seed he has purchased about 500 bushels more at $4.50. This same seed will find its way back to the county next spring at about $7.50 per bushel.—Jessamine Journal.

At Wichita, Kan. in the district Court Judge Reed declared the eight-hour law unconstitutional. Judge Reed is the first District Judge to pass on the act. He holds it contrary to both the State and the federal Constitutions, and declares it a restraint on the liberties of action. Claims aggregating hundreds of thousands of dollars for overtime under the act are pending against every county and city in the State.

The total amount of the Tribble land sale in Madison was $130,000. The home place of 366 1/2 acres, and one of the finest homes in the county, sold to J. Stone Walker for $62,000; Terrell place, 295 acres, J. S. Walker, $58; Peter Tribble place, 561 acres, D. M. Chenault, $54; Estill place, 198 1/2 acres, J. W. Bales, $50.35; Itayburn place 98 1/2 acres, J. B. Parks, $59.90; Bailley place, 124 acres, G. W. Bailley, $32.10; Miller place, 335 acres, H. B. Dillingham, $55; place of 68 1/2 acres, C. D. Chenault, $50.

S. F. Stone bought of J. B. Durham one bunch of cattle at 21 cents, and one lot of late lambs at 4 cents. W. J. Lacy, of near town, sold to J. W. Hughes, of Flat Creek, four 1,200-lb feeding steers for $174. Geo. A. Vice bought for his firm, Boyd, Hendrix & Co., of near Sherburne, 9 fat steers, averaging 350 pounds, at $2.35 per hundred, of John W. Corbin, of near Reynolds. J. J. Crain, of Hillsboro, bought the following: 4 fat oxen of John B. Darnell, of White Oak, at $2.50 and $2.75 per hundred pound; 2 fat oxen at Wyoming of Mrs. L. Donan, of this place, at $3 per 100 pounds.—Owingsville Outlook.

AFTER AWHILE.

After awhile
The sorrow that pain us will melt in a smile,
And the home that we bet on will win every mile.

After awhile
The fire will blaze and the kettle will "boil,"
And each will be in like a millionaire's pile.

After awhile
(Let no one the song I am singing revile)
We'll hitch up and gallop to glory in style.

After awhile
—Atlanta Constitution.

How sad to our hearts are some scenes of our childhood,
As our recollections present them to view;
The use of the switch that was brought from the wildwood,
And ardent punishments most of us knew.

And saddest of all is the thought of the pill-box,
That mother brought out when she thought we were ill,
Of the griping, the aching, the twisting and torment
Wrapped up in the horrible old-fashioned pill.

But that's all old away with.
